Israel shells villages

BEIRUT, March 21 (Ageocies) -Grenade-throwing Muslim gunmeo attacked a Lebanese army truck in Beirut Friday, wounding six soldiers, a Beirut police spokesman reported.

He said the attack was mounted by guomeo from Al Morabitoun; the largest Muslim militia fielded in Lebanon's 1975-76 civil ar,

The truck was carrying about 30 soldiers to the Beirut port to guard the facility against occasional sniping between Muslim and rightist Christian militiamen, the spokesman said.

The truck was attacked in the busy cor-niche Mazran street. The assailants used machine guns and rocket propelled grenades in addition to hand grenades, the spokesman

The scene of the attack was later cordoned by red bereted units from Lebanoo's Squad 16 police force, which prevented attempts to take the rest of the troopers captive, according to the spokeman.

The wounded soldiers were rushed by Squad 16 jeeps to the military bospital in mostly-Christian East Beirut and the American University Hospital in the city's Muslim -sector, the spokesman said. One wounded soldier said upoo admittance that the truck driver failed to beed an order to stop at a Murabitoun checkpoint, and this caused the attack. An army barracks was attacked in West Beirut last month by milioameo who claimed the "presence of regulars was provocative."

Threee soldiers were wounded in the attack. A week later, the army garrisoo in the Muslim-populated port city of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, was ringed and pounded with mortars by local Muslim groups. Four soldiers were killed. Meaowhile, Lebanoo and the Palestine Liberation Organization Thursday accused Israel of shelling several villages in southern Lebanon over the past five days that left four rivilians dead and 14 others injured by offi-

'Settlements jeopardize autonomy'

Vance explains U.S. vote

WASHINGTON, March 21 - Secretary of State Cyrus Vance bas said the United States originally decided to vote for the United Nations resolution condemning Israel's settlements in the occupied territories because "the settlements issue was becoming more exacerbated and jeopardizing the autonomy talks."

"We boped the resolution would create the best atmosphere for the autonomy talks to succeed." Vance said in candidly admitting to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the administration may bave miscalculated Israeli reaction to the March 1 resolution.

At the first public inquiry into the controversy surrounding the U.S. vote at the U.N. and its subsequent turnaround, the secretary strongly reaffirmed the United States' commitment to Israel's security while con-oning to shoulder full responsibility for the communications breakdown" that led to the United States voong for the resolution.

During a fiery morning session of questions, Vance reiterated that U.S. policy towards Israel has not changed. "Israel remains of strategie value and a source of stability. It always has been and will cooonue to be," be told the Senate panel which was not easily pacified with some of his answers.

While oot directly saying that the U.S. was trying to "send a message" to Israel on its settlements policy — as one senator summed up his theory for U.S. reasoning in supporting the resolution - Vance did admit that the settlements issue has slowed down progress in the autonomy negodadons.

· "We were trying to change Israel's position .oo the settlements" to move along the stalled autonomy talks. Vance said in further explaining the U.S. posiooo regarding the controversial U.N. vote.

While Vance said the administration may have erred to believing that U.S. support for the Security Council resolution would move the autonomy talks off dead center, the secretary also assured the Senate panel that the U.S. vote bas not backfired and "derailed" the autonomy talks as some senators sug-

While making no direct link between the U.S. hoped for response from the vote at the U.N. and Presideot Carter's subsequent decision to invite both Egypt's President Anwar Sadat and Israel's Prime Minister Menahem Begin to Washingtoo, Vance did say the two plans have the same goal - to accelerate progress in the autonomy talks.

We were concerned that time was running out," Vance said in explaining the White House invitations issued Wednesday for Sadat and Begin to parlay bere in April with "Such discussions though have been considered for a considerable period of ome," Vance added. While he said that a three-way summit meeting is "oot contemplated," Vance did oot rule out the possibility of a Camp David II summit in the future. Speaking specifically of U.S. policy toward the Palestinians, the secretary of state said

Bonn borrows billions from Saudi Arabia

BONN, March 21 (AP) — The West German government confirmed Friday it is borrowing billions of marks from Saudi Arabia to offset effects of a deficit io the current balance of payments.

Deputy spokesman Armin Gruenewald told reporters the government planned to borrow "under ten billioo marks," or about $5.4 billion, but be gave oo specific figures. Gruenewald said the move was aimed to offset capital outflows caused by the fact that there is "no oew meaning" in the term "local, Arab and Palestiniao populatioo": wbich was used in the U.N. resolution.

West Germany's current account turned ioto a 1979 deficit of 9 billioo marks ($4.8 billioo) from a surplus of 17.6 billioo marks ($9.5 billion) io 1978.

"That is a demographic description," Vance said in answering persistent quesconing from Senator Jacob K. Javits (Republican) of New York.

"The term is one used in the past, and is not a determination of sovereignty," Vance

Also on the subject of Palesonian national rights, Vance told Committee Chairman Senator Frank Church (Democrat) of Idaho that the Carter administration remains opposed to an "independent Palesonian

But Vance left open the door for U.S. approval of a future Palestinian state linked with another Arab naoon - such as Jordan.

Speaking about Jerusalem, the secretary reiterated that it bas been U.S. policy since 1970 that a "Jerusalem should be undivided," but in a carefully articulated answer Vance said the term "undivided" refers only to physical divisions - such as barbed wire.

We can not speak for the ulomate sovereignty." That can only be decided through future negotiations," Vance added.

The Camp David accords contain oo written commitments on future Israeli settlements in occupied territories, but Vance told the senators, who were not easily satisfied with his carefully worded responses, that there were "oral exchanges" on the subject. When asked if Begin made a commitment at Camp David on halong future settlements,

Vance said: "Begin believes be did not." During the quescioning, one Secator, Joseph R. Biden, Jr. (Democrat of Delaware) called Begin''dead wrong' on his settlements policy. Bideo, also talking about the U.S. vote on the U.N. resolution, said he could understand the U.S. position if "we are trying to send a clear message to Begin,"

'That would put the vote in a political sense, something all we poliocians could understood," he said.

Vance faces another gruelling session of quescions on the vote "misunderstanding" Friday when he tesufies before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

He was addressing a ceremony organized by B'oai B'rith, a Jewish service organizacoo to honor 11 denominational and nonsectarian groups that bave provided aid to Iodochina refugees.

A oumber of United Nations officials and diplomats, including Ahmed Esmi Abdel Meguid of Egypt and Israel's deputy U.N. representative, Shamay Cahana, were among the invited guests.

"The United States remains a full partner in those crucial oegotiations oow underway," he said referring to talks between . Egypt and Israel on autonomy for Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West bank of the Jordan aod the Gaza Strip. Palestiniao leaders bave boycotted the talks.

Meanwhile, Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Sbamir, in his first interviews to Israeli oews media since taking office March 10, urged the Palestinians to joio autocomy oegotiadons.

"One hundred years of conflict have shown that the Arabs bave achieved nothing by extremism and terrorism," Shamir said in an interview broadcast Friday on Israel radio. "This is an opportunity for them to improve their status in the area."

In interviews in two afternoon oewspapers, Maariv and Yediot, Shamir also called for ao information campaign to reverse the European trend toward recognision of the Palesooe Liberacon Organization, and said differeoce between the United States and Israel were likely to intensify following the U.S. presidential elections in November.

Company has 'waterfall rights'

Norwegians offer water for Arabs

OSLO, March 21 - Norway, a "waterrich" country is lining up with other nations trying to market fresh water to Saudi Arabia and Gulf countries.

"It offers high quality water from an everlasting source on the west coast of Norway," says Viego Amundsen, of Hjalmar Lund Shipping of Oslo.

The company, which has exclusive marketing rights to a waterfall in Norway, claims "the water has been officially tested and satisfies chemical and hacteriological requirements for trade."

Saudi Arabia, a country without rivers, presently produces desalinated water to ease the country's thirst.

"We can load this water into tankers at a speed of 20,000 tons per hour, and would like to emphasize that water loaded into the hallast tanks of modern vessels having segregated ballast system, would remain absolutely clean as no oil has ever been loaded in these tanks," Amundsen said.

"Taking into consideration that the largest tunkers can be loaded within 24 hours and that the loading place is situated a very short distance from where these tankers return in ballast to the Arabian Gulf, we feel confident that the oil companies will see it in their advantage to quote a reasonable rate for the transportation," he added.

Amundsen said that from a modern tanker of about 3/400,000 tons dry weight it should thus be possible to receive about 50/100,000 tons of clean drinking water,

Study calls for continuous monitoring

High pollution levels found in Saudi Arabia

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, March 21 - An official report just issued indicates a high level of air pollution in the Kingdom's major cines, and recommends continuous monitoring in order to characterize problem areas and set ambient standards.

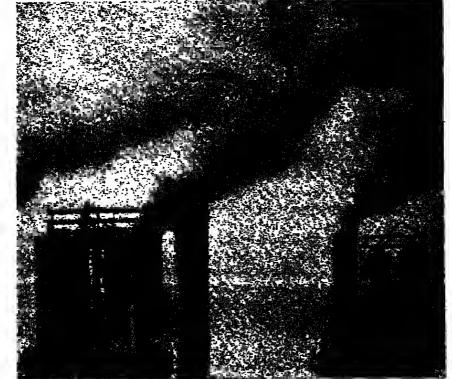

The 1977 report of the General Directorate of Meteorology, of the Ministry of Defense and Aviation published this week, said that measurements and monitoring indicated that significant pollution levels were already present in many areas. During the period from March 16, 1977 through April 1,1977 ambient air pollution monitoring measurements were conducted in several areas of the country.

The measurements were made in major population centers of Jeddah, Riyadh and Dhahran. Studies also were conducted near the proposed industrial areas of Jubail and Yanbu. The measurements made included continuous monitoring of sulfur dioxide, oxidants, carbon monoxide, hydrogen sulfide, nitric oxide, and total suspended par-

"Results indicate that significant pollution levals are already present in many areas. The downtown areas of major population centers exhibit carbon dioxide levels which average 10 to 20 parts per million with peaks higher than 50 ppm during period of traffic conges-

Sulfur dioxide levels are consistently in the range of 25 to 50 parts per billion, but levels as high as 90 pph were found downwind of the Ras Tanura refinery in the small town of Safwa. Oxidant levels as high as 0.35 ppm were also recorded in this area, and in the town of Jubail oxidants peak values as high 0.55 ppm were found."

The report said it was difficult to assess the levels of oxides of nitrogen and hydrogen sulfide since they were commonly at the lower end of sensitivity of the monitors used. Total suspended particulates were also high. The highest recorded was 967 per cubic

For test purposes the directorate chose a few sites in Jeddah. On March 17,1977 the site was downtown near Said Stores, King Abdul Aziz Street. The temperature was 24C, relative humidity 63% at 1314 hours. Very high carbon dioxide levels were meas-

Significant levels of carbon dioxide were found in downtown. Riyadh during the same week due to heavy traffic in the area. And in the Riyadh airport neighborhood low levels were indicated except for some high carbon dioxide peaks. Manual readings were taken from the ozone monitor digital readout which indicated some levels of significance. Jubail recorded the highest levels of oxidants at 0.551 ppm. All other values were low except for several high carbon dioxide peaks. At Safwa the highest sulfur dioxide level was recorded at 90 ppb. Ozone was also relatively

Saudi Comment By Hussein Ali Hussein

We are making a clamor and cry over the opening of a women's bank, as if it will bring in its trail some problems for the ladies of our country. Why is it that we are so reluctant to see a woman deposit her funds in a bank whose entire staff is made up of her own species?

There are, after all, many women in commercial business. Some of them, including widows and the divorced, are engaged in sale and purchase transactions. while others' wealth becomes a focal point for the weak-spirited people of their own families. Why can't she have the right to manage her funds and put them herself into a bank that has been opened especially for her?

It seems to be a necessity because other banks do not accept deposits by women and, if they do, it has to be done through a male representative. It is a practice which often puts women depositors to unnecessary difficulties and problems.

Some people bave made a hig fuss about women's hanking, although it is very natural for an affluent country to have such a facility for its citizens.

Our women do not normally go out. But if they do, they are accompanied by someone until they come back home. Our protest of her going out to the bank may create a problem for ourselves. It might necessitate that we close down our hospitals, schools and women's colleges, since the vagabonds will harass them as they will inside a women's bank. It is an opinion calling for a guardian that a woman does not really feel much in need of.

The advocate of the women's bank is, no doubt, a person of refined thinking whose intentions no one can afford to suspect. We will only be unjust to women and to the originator of this idea if we tried to interpret it otherwise. It is definitely a service to women to find an institution to serve her hy protecting her resources without any selfish motives.

Hasa groups plan projects for cultural improvement

HASA, March 21 (SPA) - As part of the plan for cultural, scientific, housing and handicraft improvements the Social Development Center of Hasa adopted numerous projects.

The Women's Committee of the center organized an English language training session for ladies in Umran. Presently, 14 ladies joined the session, Khalifa Al-Naeen the director of the center said Friday.

The center is carrying out a project to improve housing. The project began four months ago, and helps 90 families from ten villages in the center's operation range area.

The government has raised part of the project's capital. The rest has been collected through local contributions. It helps improve the health and living standards of the families.

The center also helps kindergartens in Umran, Jafr, and Fidoul and provideshen with various sports and playing equipment, It gives kindergartens special attention to ensure social, health and psychological care for the children. Khalifa said.

There are 270 children in these kindergar-

Syria minister blames U.S., Israel for internal unrest

DAMASCUS, March 21 (Agencies) - A top Syrian official has blamed recent unrest in northern Syria on American and Israeli agents taking advantage of merchants dissatisfied with price controls imposed by the Socialist government.

Information Minister Ahmad Iskandar Ahmad, answering written questions at his office here Thursday also praised his country's deepening strategic relationship with the Soviet Union.

The minister calmly commented on the strikes and demonstrations that shut down the northern cities of Aleppo and Hama for about a week earlier this month.

Anti-government demonstrators firebombed the offices of the government airline and the Soviet airline, Aeroflot, in Aleppo, along with some liquor stores and government run supermarkets, sources said.

Iskandar rejected reports from Western diplomatic sources here that the disturbances reflect growing popular discontent with the government of President Hafez Assad, who has been in power since 1970.

"The United States of America and Israel are the head of the snake in the plan," said Iskandar, echoing Assad's repeated verbal attacks on the two countries. "This is clear and evident whether through political analysis or through information we have obtained through our investigations of the killers.

The minister, who has been a member of the regional command of the ruling Arab

Army officer mun dered in Turkey

ANKARA, March 21 (AP) - Unidentified gunmen killed a Turkish army lieuten-ant in the south eastern city of Diyarbakir, officials reported Thursday.

They said Lt. Omer Koc, attached to the martial law headquarters in Diyarbakir, was Socialist Baath Party for six weeks, said America was fomenting the trouble because of Syria's refusal to join the Americansponsored Camp David peace process.

He said the Muslim Brotherhood and other reactionary and feudalist elements were helping the U.S. and Israel to stir up unrest.

"Those who launched these disturbances have taken the pretext of some negative aspects of the internal situation in order to serve their own political aims," he said. "They have tried to take advantage of the resentment of some merchants to the law, passed by the Syrian parliament, imposing severe punishment on anyone who raises prices without reason above official rates."

The minister confirmed news reports that Assau has approved use of the Syria-Israel border for Palestinian commando raids against the Jewish state. Meanwhile, an official source said Friday that the government is relaxing restrictions on the activities of the Syrian Communist Party and three other lefust groups.

Along with President Assad's ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, the four are grouped in the National Progressive Front formed in 1973 to broaden the base of the government.

The source said that members of the four parties would now be allowed to work in some government departments,

Apart from the Communist Party, restrictions were being lifted on the Union Socialist Party, the Arab Socialist Party and the Union of Arab Socialists, the source added.

Egypt urges Israel to clarify security stand

CAJRO, March 21 (R) — Egyptian Premier Mustapha Kbalil has said negotiations on Palesunian autonomy for the West Bank and Gaza Strip could not be completed on May 26 as scheduled unless Israel defined its security requirements.

Khalil, speaking at a news conference Thursday, said Israeli negotiators bad brought up the security question at every discussion during the 10-month-old talks, but failed to clarify their stand.

"We are urging the Israeli government to agree to form a committee that would clarify and discuss the issue of security. If the Israelis will be reluctant to accept this I don't think that we can proceed and meet the May 26 date," Khalil said.

May 26 is the date set up by the Camp David Middle East accords, signed by Egypt, Israel and the U.S. in Washington in 1978, to complete autonomy negonations for 1.5 million Palesnnians on the West Bank and in

Khalil said Egypt insisted that Israel should table its concept of security and that Egypt will propose the formation of a committee on the issue during a ministerial meeting on autonomy in Alexandria next week, He boped that talks which President Carter has called in Washington next month, with President Sadat and Israeli Premier Menahem Begin would belp surmount obsta-

U.S. aide holds talks in Pakistan

KARACHI, March 21 (AP) — President Zia ul-Haq has said that the commander of the U.S. Seventh Fleet and other high ranking naval officers were in Pakistan for consultations with the government. In an interview with the daily Nawai Waqt of Lahor Wednesday, Zia said that the U.S. officials bave not yet called on him, but the talks were arranged. He did not elaborate. .Zia stated that process of bringing about important changes in the country's military structure would be completed by the end of the month and new corps commanders will take up their charge soon. He also said that he had extended his term of office for the chief of army staff, In another development, British Ambassador to Pakistan O.G. Forster said Wednesday night bis country had written off a 1.5 billion rupee ($ 150 million) loan made to Pakistan last year.

"Now Pakistao bas oothing to pay back to Britain," he said. He said he hoped other aid-giving countries would also reschedule or write off Pakistan's debts to reduce its economic strains. Forster said that Britain is providing 434 million rupees ($ 43.5 million) in fresh economic assistance.

Sudan mediating Ethiopia-Eritrea dispute

DOHA, March 21 (R) - Sudanese President Jaafar Numeiri says his country is trying to solve the 18-year-old conflict between the Ethiopian government and guerrillas in Ethiopia's eastern Eritrea province.

Numeiri, who arrived in Qatar Wednesday on the third leg of a Gulf toor, said on local television: "The recent rapprochment between Ethiopian and Sudan is aimed at solving the Ethiopian-Eritrean dispute and other problems in our reg-

"We are trying to help the two sides to reach an agreement acceptable to both." be added.

Ethiopia and Sudan agreed last week to end their differences. Addis Abbaba radio said Wednesday talks bad begun in Asmara, capital of the Red Sea province of Eritrea, to eliminate problems in their relations.

Ethiopia bas in the past accused neighboring Sudan of supporting the Eritrean guerrillas.

Numeiri said Sudan could help end disputes such as that in Eritrea "since we ended a war in the south of Sudan which lasted 17 years, reaching a satisfactory solution with autonomy for the south within a united Sudan. Numeiri also announced bis suport for a "national charter" governing inter-Arab relations proposed by Iraq. He said he agreed the charter should be studied at a summit of Arab leaders.

Sudan and Iraq broke off diplomatic relations a year ago after the Iraqi press criticized what it said was Sudan's support for the U.S. negotiated peace treaty between Egypt and Israel. The Qatar news agency said Numeiri telephone Iraq's President Saddam Hussein to tell him he backed the Iraqi charter, which rejects foreign military bases on Arab soil and calls for peaceful solutions to inter-Arab disputes.

Tribal law, a rule of the road in Jordan

By Norah Barger

MMAN - The idea that an automobile deadly machine perhaps occurred later to sterners than it did to the Arabs. Since the oduction of cars into Jordan, traffic ths have been settled by tribal law. Tradially, unless a truce is made, tribal revencan be taken for murder or injury icted by an instrument. Automobiles were rediately recognized here as falling under category.

ribal courts were abolished in Jordan ie four years ago. Tribal law today has a us that lawyers term "legal but not the While the more sophisticated here were eved to be rid of baving to adhere to tribal eveo they will take recourse to it to settle arations after a death in a car accident. urthermore, the requirements of tribal are heeded by the police, settlemeots are ered by insurance companies and judges er seoteoce if a tribal peace has been le. People involved in these professions ay they would advise anyone responsible a death in a car accident to seek a tribal e immediately from the family of the principle reason they give for adherence ibal law in such cases is that tradition still Jeep-rooted here. While one party may spurn tribal law the other may not, sentiog the possibility, which law preement officers abhor, of international rder or property damage reason the sophisticated give for observtribal law is its speed. A final truce and an sement for a settlement is usually accomped within three months. In cootrast, vers and insurance agents say, a civil suit ught to claim reparations for a death may : up to three or four years to settle. The eness of civil juscice is attributed to Jor-

's chronie lack of judges.

Vhen an automobile accident comes to rt, judges determine only whether the onsible party bas violated traffie laws, therefore the common right. The peral right of the injured persoo or the family ne dead to collect damages can be fulfilled er through filing a separate civil suit or sugh tribal law. According to a Minister of rior lawyer, the use of tribal law in traffie -dents is "purely a voluntary undertaklonetheless, police at the sceoe of an accit usually begin immediate arrangements a tribal truce called an 'atwa, from the uly of the dead. They cootact the family of responsible party and help them put ether a jaha, a delegation of notables that ally includes a governor or other high offi-1. It never includes any member of the two es involved in the accident.

The jaha visits the family of the deceased to : for an 'atwa on behalf of the family of the guilty person. Through the jaha's request for a truce, this latter family expresses its guilt and sorrow for the accident as well as its readiness to seek forgiveness and make reparations for it. By accepting an 'atwa, the family of the deceased agrees not to take revenge oo the other family through murder or property damage, such as burning the car con-

This 'atwa ofteo is made within hours after the accident, and almost always before the deceased is buried. It lasts three-and-a-third days in accordance with the traditional tribal division of one third of a power of ten. It is called 'atwa imhal, the truce of respite. In days past, the tribe of the responsible party used this time to clear out of their village to prevent any incidents after the truce. It is also called 'atwa fort ad dam, or the truce made when the blond of the family of the deceased boils with anger and desire for revenge.

If an 'atwa is oot made, the family of the deceased traditionally has the right to kill the responsible party, or any other one person from his tribe be be a minister or a meodicant. Sometimes, the family of the responsible party may refuse to make an 'atwa out of an unwillingness to admit guilt or to pay reparations. Or the family of the deceased may refuse a truce out of pride. In such cases, high government officials will intervene and press for a truce in order to appold civil order and to preveot an ontbreak of intertribal warfare.

After the three-and-a-third days are over, the 'atwa is generally recewed for a period of up to several mooths. Uotil the 'atwa is extended, the responsible person, regardless of his guilt, is usually held in jail for his own

During this secood period, the jaha oegotiates arrangements for a final truce of peace, or 'atwa sulh. The family of the deceased may attach cooditions to the extention of the 'atwa. It may insist that the jaha ensure that the responsible party will not be released from prisoo oo hail. They may ask that his family leave town, or demand that the family provides them with food - rice, meat or sugar sufficient for 100 or eveo 1,000 persons

- during the 'atwa period.

Once the jaha has completed the final oegotiations it goes to the bouse of the deceased with the persoo responsible for the accident. Should it be a woman, her closest male relative goes in her stead as women are excluded from the entire 'atwa process.

The guilty persoo enters the house oo his knees with an 'iqul, the Arab headband,? around his oeck. Approaching the closest relation of the deceased, he says, "I am your camel, load me."

The relation responds, "I load you with (for example) 1,000 dinars", adding, "but for the sake of the Prophet, I relieve you" of a certain amount. The guilty party is relieved of certain other amounts for the sake of others including certain sheikhs, the crown prince and, finally, the king. In this ritualistic way, the family gives up all its rights to revenge and further reparations. The two families, finally at peace, sign a contract that an 'atwa sulh has been made between them.

The final reparations amount is traditionally JD 333 ($1,000) but sometimes it is higher if the deceased left many dependents or was an important family member, such as a doctor. Sometimes the person is relieved of the entire amount. In the past, each male member of the tribe contributed an equal amount to pay for the 'atwa sulh. Today, bowever, it is the insurance company which covers it. The settlement fee and other expenses, such as food, incurred during 'atwa oegotiations, are usually paid immediately.

By law in Jordan, drivers must carry insurance at least against injury or death to a third party. The maximum amount of coverage which includes multiple deaths that might occur in a single accident — is JD 5,000 ($ 15,000). Because 'atwa reparations are low, insurance companies rarely need to pay out the full amount. If ooe wishes to recover a higher amount he can initiate what will be a prolonged and complicated civil suit. An agent for the oldest and largest insurance company here says that about 15 per cent of their clients choose to take this course. The companies, he said, beavily favor tribal settlements because they are quick and cheap.

In case of injury, an 'atwa is also often taken but on a smaller scale. The insurance company theo pays either the tribal settlement or the bospital bills (up to JD 5,000) of the injured person.

The law treats payments made through atwa as an out-of-court settlement. However, if a trihal peace and reparations have already been made when the case comes to court, judges are more lenient in imposing fines and sentences on the guilty party.

The maximum sentence here for a death caused unintentionally in a traffic accident is six months, provided oo flagrant traffie violations have occurred. The secteoce is usally reduced to three mooths imprisooment, the maximum sentence that can be substituted by paying a fine in Jordan. Because of this special legal treatment a tribal peace confers oo the guilty party, lawyers urge their clients to take 'atwa.

At least one Ministry of Interior official who deals daily with tribal disputes, considers any adherence to tribal law a poteotial source of civil disorder, a headache he wishes would just go away. He is hopeful that as the "population becomes more sophisocated, the custom of 'atwa will become less prevalent."

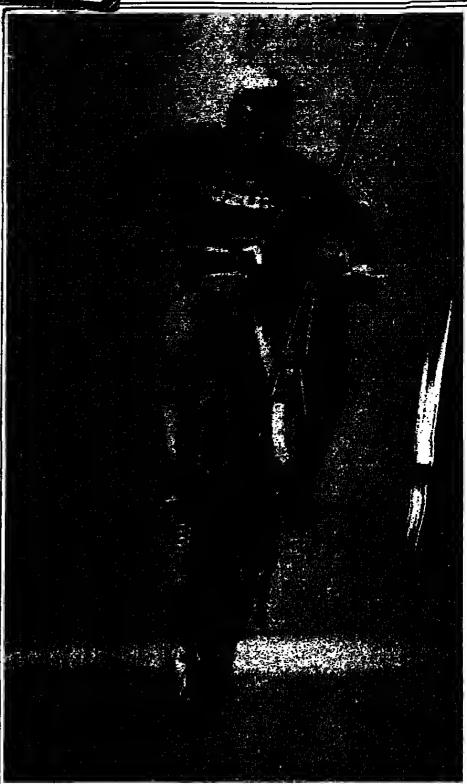

Insurance ageots and lawyers, who deal persocally with the parties involved in car accidents, bowever, see salutory psychological beoefits in tribal settlements. They point out that the hereaved family is given a safe and legitimate way io which to veot anger over the loss of a family member. Furthermore, the responsible party who has killed someone without malice does not need to carry his oatural, though logically unwarranted, guilt for the deed by himself because the burdeo of guilt is shared with all his family. They also pointed out that this guilt is expiated through ritual.

As one lawyer said, "atwa results in a satisfaction of a psychological sort for all parties coocerned." He expressed fear that this benefit of tribal law would be lost if the impersonal court proceedings and insurance oegotiations of the West took over in Jordao.

An insurance ageot added: "I think atwais a good idea; It suits our temperameots."

DECISIVE EVENTS

The end of this month is due to witness two events which can have a far reaching effect on the present quest for a just and comprehensive settlement for the Middle East crisis. In both of them the effect can go either way. Each of them can either propel the effort for peace forward or return it back to its point of departure.

The first of these is the European summit due to be held in Brussels on March 31. The summit will show if the European powers are now ready to come up with a firm plan for a peace initiative which will adequately take into account the legitimate aspirations of the Arab side, specifically the Palestinians.

The signs here are quite encouraging. President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's declarations oo the rights of the Palestinians are still fresh in Arab minds. And these have been backed most recently by a statement from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in which she asked an informal gathering of Arab ambassadors to "wait some positive developments."

But there are oegative signs as well. Some of the European states might still cave in under the determined pressure mounted at present by Israel, the United States and the various Zionist lobbies inside Europe to abort such a possibility. Israeli Prime Minister Begin has said that the United States is already attempting to persuade the Europeans to include no mention of "the Palestinian right to self-determination" in any declaration on the issue they might make. If this proves to be true, Arab-American relatioos will be very seriously

The second important, also at the end of this month, is linked to this last consideration. It is the time when the U.N. Security Council is due to meet to debate the problem of Palestine. This is expected to ceoter on either an amendment or a displacement of U.N. Resolution 242, in which the rights of the Palestinians as a people are unambiguously upheld. The debate is to prove decisive on where the United States will

The human tragedy of chemical defoliants

By Joyce Egginton

NEW YORK -For many of the Americans who fought in it, the Vietnam war may not be over. More than 10 years after the event, the use of chemical defoliants upon millions of acres of Vietnamese countryside is alleged to be bringing death and destruction to thousands of young Americans who thought they were survivors.

Some have recently died of cancer, Others have crippling malignancies. Many more have a variety of stubborn medical conditions of a type associated with exposure to dioxin — a highly toxic chemical which was present in "Agent Orange", the defoliant most widely used by the U.S. military. Even more alarming, some American ex-servicemen have fathered children who, in medical terms, are mousters.

Some of these infants resemble "thalidnmide babies", in whom eyes or ears have never formed, and limbs are grossly shortened or entirely missing. Others have been born with internal organs outside the body, or with organs lacking nr duplicating. About 500 veterans of the Vietnam war have filed suit against the American chemical companies which supplied Ageot Orange to the U.S. military: nical Company, the Monsanto Comp Hercules Inc., Diamond Shamrock Corporation, and North American Philipps Corporation. They are demanding that these companies set up a multibillion dollar trust to cover the cost of medical treatment and disability pensions, not only fur themselves and their dependents, but also for all other ex-servicemen and their children whn may suffer further health damage from past exposure to Agent Orange.

The law suit is being left open so that others may join as the case proceeds. Victor Yannacone, the Long Island attorney who heads a consortium of 12 law firms representing the plaintiffs, beliefs there are several hundreds more Agent Orange cases which could be filed oow, and that 2.4 million Vietnam veterans are at risk.

A New York federal judge has already cut through a lot of red tape by ruling that all the cases may be consolidated in his court, and the trial is expected to begin within a year.

It is the veterans' e teotion that the chemical companies knew of the hazards of Agent Orange hut, in their eagerness far the Vietnam contracts, did not warn the U.S. military authorioes and did oot take time to develop a herbicide which was relatively safe. The military borrowed the idea from the British, who used a chemical known as 2,4,5-T to clear supply routes in Malaysia.

Agent Orange — orange because of the colnr coding on the drums in which it was packed - was a 50-50 mixture of 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D both of which have been in civilian use for years as weedbillers. Absolute parity in such chemicals, especially when manufactured on a huge scale, is elusive. It is virtually impossible to produce 2,4,5-T without also creating very small quantities of a dioxin known as TCDD. This is the most toxic of all man-made chemicals - the same kind of dioxin which was spewed by a leaking reactor over the Italian town of Seveso in July, 1976.

"During the war, when Dow and Monsanto were turning out large quantities of Agent Orange, no one made much effort to keep out the dioxin," according to Yannacone. "The air force was demanding quantity, not quality cootrol."

This suit does not include the military authorities. It cannot. Thirty years ago the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that men who had served in the forces may not sue the U.S. government for injuries sustained by the negligence of military authorities when they were on active service.

The chemical companies deny liability. In a counter-suit, Dow Chemical (the leading supplier of Agent Orange to the military) has accused the U.S. government of misusing the defoliant in Vietnam. Dow contends that federal authorities should have known the risks involved, and alleges that it was prevented from putting warning labels on the

Wherever the blame lies, the decision to defoliate vast tracts of Vietnam is having repercussions beyond anyone's imagining at the time. Many of the men whose health has been damaged nr whose children are defective have only just begin to make the link between their exposure to Agent Orange and what started happening in their bodies several years

About 100, living in the New York area, met for the first time recendy at a rally in a Long Island church hall. Many brought their wives and children youngsters who included a toddler whn was born without a gullet, a baby girl with hands growing directly from her shoulders, and a surprisingly happy nine-year-old named Kerry Ryan who has spent most of her life having corrective surgery. She was born more than two years after her father, Michael Ryan, returned from the war,

"Kerry was injured on the battle field with me," he insists. "If I had not been exposed to Agent Orange she would have been nkay." Both Michael and his wife Maureen came from large families with no history of birth defects.

Kerry had 18, including the absence of a rectum, a large hale in the heart, duplicate reproduction organs and malformation one arm. She was blind for two years and cannot walk. Her father's alleged exposure to Agent Orange had less obvious effects - severe weight loss, some apparent liver damage, frequent migraines and a persistent and debilitating skin complaint known as chloracne, the most frequent symptoms of dioxin poisoning.

The bizarre multiplication of effects caused many young couples at the meeting to wonder aloud whether Agent Orange could cause genetic damage which might not only affect their children but persist into successive generations.
"Suppose Kerry had been normal," Maureen

Ryan conjectured. "From what I now know about dioxin - how it can change the structure of genes the problems which we now see in her could appear, instead, in her children."

It was a chilling thought, "Dioxin is one of the chemicals which interferes with DNA," Victor Yannacone told the meeting. "It is something which all those of you of child-bearing age must be aware

An ugly solution to this problem has presented itself to a few Vietnam veterans. One young man stated that he had recently had surgery for testicular cancer: "I suffered castration because of my exposure to Agent Orange."

More common symptoms are chloracue, liver, damage neutosis, dramani, weight loss, numbriess of the hands and feet and gastro intestinal problems. Most of these conditions have appeared in the veterans some time after exposure to Agent Orange, and the cancers have taken at least 10 years to develop.

hospitals for ex-servicemen throughout the country, has been reluctant to acknowledge that any of these symptoms are related to exposure to Agent Orange. The men are bitter about this, since it means a lack of proper treatment and, in most cases, the denial of diability payments or survivins' benefits, in case of their deaths.

For the VA's part none of its staff members seems to have been aware of Agent Orange contamination until quite recently. The first one to suspect it was a case worker in Chicago, Maude De Victor, who interviewed a tearful widow in July,

A formerly healthy man, he had told his wife: "If ever I get cancer it's from those chemicals we used in Vietnam." She did not know what chemicals he had been talking about, but related the remark to Mrs. De Victor who was sufficiently intrigued to do some research of her own,

She found ont about the dioxin in Agent Orange, and how it was a known cancer agent. "These Vietnam veterans aren't exaggerating when they say they have been poisoned," she told her superiors. Few believed her. She was removed from casework and, she maintains, has had her mail intercepted and her telephone tapped.

The Veterans Administration has had 5,000 complaints of Agent Orange-related disease but has made only a few disability awards.

If the veterans prove their case in court, the implications for the U.S. government will extend beyond its own citizens to an unknown oumber of victims in Vietnam. America's use of defoliants from 1962 to 1970 was the most controversial aspect of the war, justified by the Pentagon on the grounds that it was necessary to reduce the Vietcong's jungle cover. As time went on, there were persistent reports that U.S. planes were also spraying rice crops and that innocent peasants were stary-

After bitter criticisms at the United Nations, the American Academy for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) sent some of its own independent experts to Vietnam to investigate. Their reports of devastating damage to the ecology was shortly followed by the U.S. government's decision to end defoliation.

Even so, the AAAS experts had only a glimpse of the human problem. They reported being told of miscarriages and hirth defects among Vietnamese, but since practically no statistics were kept in the rural areas it was impossible to tell whether this reported increase was significant, or even correct. The scientists' report concentrated on visible damage to the land.

Several years passed before it was realized that perhaps some of the U.S. air crews who had been on spraying missions might also have been affected by Agent Orange. Now it is emerging that every American who fought in Vietnam (not to mentioo Vietnamese) may have risked exposure. Most of the plaintiffs in the suit against the chemical companies were infantry soldiers who camped and fought in areas which had been cleared by the defoliants. Some have no recollection of being sprayed."The air crews could go back to base after a flying mission and take a shower," said one. "We didn't change our clothes for days, and drank from streams which had been contaminated by the chem-

The plaintiffs have formed an organization, Agent Orange Victims International with a rapidly ingrowing membership. Its president, Frank McCarthy is touring the U.S. on what he calls "the last search and destroy mission" - gathering names of affected Vietnam veterans to add to the list of plaintiffs. He is also in touch with Australian veterans of.

the Vietnam war who have similar complaints. "In 12 years of combat in Vietnam the U.S. hac 57,002 men killed," McCarthy says. "We believe there are as many veterans suffering from chronic toxicity as the result of exposure to Agent Orange plus about 350,000 with minor symptoms. There are 5,000 cases of cancer alone."

In the absence of official statistics, the estimates of Frank McCarthy and Victor Yannacone of the number of victims are as close as anyone can come a It would be of little value, so long after the war, to do tissue tests of all the men complaining of symptoms. A negative finding could denote an earlier exposure to dioxin which had passed out of the body, leaving a trail of damage; or no exposure a

Dr. James Allen, professor of pathology and tor icology at the University of Wisconsin and one of America's researchers in dioxins, says: "There is oam were exposed to Agent Orange. There must be thorough epidemiological studies conducted by the Federal government throughout the country so that we can get a much better idea whether all these birth defects, cancers and other disorders are the result of this exposure.

"I can't do it alone, nor can any other scientist. But I'm very concerned about the effect of these chemicals and the wellbeing of future generations. Our bodies can repair only a certain amount of DNA damage, and, as a society, we could soon find, ourselves in an irreversible position."

Only a limited government study is planned - of U.S. airmen who took part in the spraying missions. Dr. Allen shares Yannacone's view about culpability. "Scientists knew what dioxin could do to people. Before the spraying started there had been several industrial explosions involving dioxin, and the effects upon workers had heeo well-

One of these explosions happened in 1949 at the West Virginia plant of the Monsanto Company. There was an outbreak of chloracne among workers at Dow Chemical in 1964 while they were producing the defoliant. All the men in Yannacone's suit insist that they were not warned of Agent Orange's toxicity. A 1966 handout given to U.S. airmen who took part in the spraying missions states: "The sprayed chemical is non-toxic to human or animal life."

"For some time I was in a reconnaissance platoon, working in extremely dense jungle that was infested by the enemy," Frank McCarthy recalls. When the defoliation mission came along I was glad to see them. I thought of the chemicals as just another part of military equipment. If I had known then what I know now I would have probably shot at our own planes."

Tracy Leden, a former aircraft mechanic, told how he helped to load aircraft tanks with Agent Orange. "We would pump it in from 55 gallon drums and the Vietnamese would help us. Some of it would splash in our faces. If we got our shoes soaked with it, they would turn to mush in no time. was only 19, and it never dawned on me that the stuff could be dangerous."

Eight years later, back in civilian life, Leden developed an ugly rash, numbness in his legs and small growths all over his body. "It took me almost two years to connect these health problems with my exposure to Agent Orange," he said.

Information about the effects upon the Vietnamese is sketchy. Dr. Tum That Tung, North Vietnam's vice-minister for health during the war years, recently visited the United States and reported an apparent increase in liver cancer, birth defects, and miscarriages among Viernamese who inhabited the sprayed areas.

"We also have chloracne in just the same way as the Italian children in Seveso," he said. But, again, there have been no widespread studies of the population and there are no reliable statistics

Many of the veterans express compassion for the Vietnamese who were harmed. "If Kerry had been born in Vietnam, she would have been dead within 48 hours," said Michael Ryan. "I don't know if we can do anything about the people still suffering out there, but we must try. It's our moral obligation."

The American car sputters toward a future

By Robert G. Kaiser The Washington Post

DETROIT - Americans who think of the $ 2,000 sutomobile as only yesterday are not going to like the 1980s. By the end of the 80s, a $ 2,000 antomobile will seem as antiquated as the nickel soft drink, and a new Chevette will probably cost about $ 15,000.

Of course, it will be smaller than the 1980 Chevette, the smallest car now made in America. Smaller, lighter and probably slower, too. Here in Detroit the experts reckon that half or more of the new cars sold in America in 1990 will be tiny (if expensive) models. And of course, they may be Datsuns, not Chevettes.

The biggest and most American industry in this country is about to be transformed. perhaps revolutionized, and it is not in good shape as this transformation begins.

The automobile, which defined modern American life, is about to be redefined itself. and the country will be changed in the process. The American companies that engineered the original automobilization of the nation are hoping and planning to be almost as important to the new era for which they are now planning, but this is still prob-

Even General Motors, a behemoth among corporations, is losing money selling cars in the United States. (It is making a profit on other activities.) Ford Motor Co. lost about a billion dollars on its 1979 car operations in North America, and expects to lose another billion in 1980.

Chrysler Corp. teeters on the brink of bankruptcy, propped up now by the promise of federal loan guarantees, but trapped in a week market that could spell its doom. Only American Motors, newly associated with Renault of France, is both bealthy and profit-

1:22 z 25 T years, I cannot see a better way to move the next 10 or 20 years, I cannot see a better way to move people or stuff around."

Secrest acknowleged that the market has shifted faster toward fuel-efficient small cars than expected, and Ford won't he able to meet the new demand at once. "So we'll have a heliuva time (in the next couple of years), but in the longer run we'll be all right."

The world car will be like a kernel of corn that will grow in every kind of soil.

The future is bright, auto executives argue. not the least because Americans will bave to replace the 100 million cars they bought in the 1970s, when assumptions were different. In effect, the changed oil situation has given the industry a buge new market - a replacement market for its own past mistakes. Of course, they didn't look like mistakes at the time. "It's just rubbish to say that the industry forced gas guzzlers on an unwitting country, one executive said.

Of course the optimists are assuming that American manufacturers will be able to hold a dominant share of the sales the '80s will' bring. They make this assumption in part than the law required (19), and the industry will soon he able to give its customers the economy they want.

The optimists make these points: General Motors' Chevette and successful new "X-Cars" (the front-wheal drive Chevrolet Citation, Oldsmobile Omega and similar models) demonstrate that the industry giant is well-placed for the '80s. Using its enormous financial resources, GM has already shrunk all its cars, moved strongly into front-wheel drive and diesel-powered cars and is experimenting on the most advanced fringe of auto technology.

After years of watching Fords make the biggest profits overseas, GM is poised to begin a worldwide offensive in foreign markets. Using its successful operations and other overseas branches as a springboard, GM is ready to shed its insular, America-first

- Ford, after lagging behind GM in converting to smaller cars - apparently by deliberate choice, on the theory that more money could be made by keeping hig models in production - is now ready to compete with the imports. Next year, Ford will introduce the small Erika, drawing heavily on the expertise of German engineers who bave made Ford's German subsidiary hugely successful and profitable.

- American Motors will he able to prosper by concentrating on the small cars that it will soon start producing with Renault and on the specialty vehicles that have served it well in recent years, particularly Jeeps. Renault is big and rich enough to keep AMC current with "the state of the art" in engine technology as it continues to develop in the

- Competition from Japan will diminish once the Japanese begin to make cars in this

In Detroit it is widely assumed that the principal reason for Japanese success bas been substantially cheaper Japanese labor side Pittshurgh.

Japan eventually will see that it faces import restrictions in the United States if it fails to build cars here - or so the people of Detroit believe. And when the Japanese are producing with American labor, they won't be able to maintain any competition advantage in their pricing.

- Later in the 'BOs, something called the "world car" should come into being, to the advantage of GM and Ford. Arvid Jouppi, a financial analyst here who specializes in the car industry, predicts flatly that during the Bus there will be a standardized vehicle whose major components are made in a variety of countries. The world car "will be like a kernel of corn that will grow in every kind of soil," Jouppi predicts.

The optimistic analysis rarely includes Chrysler Corp., unless one is talking to a Chrysler executive. Many in Detroit fear Chrysler is doomed, though it is unpatriotic for any Detroiter to say so out loud. Others think it will survive only by lowering its horizons and adopting a marketing strategy closer to AMC's than Ford's or GM's, which means producing less than a full range of vehicles and looking for market segments where it can compele with the giants.

The optimists may well be right. The resources of the big companies here are formidable. As executives of American companies here repeatedly point out, all four bave extensive experience making the small cars that all foresee as increasingly important - though far some of the companies, this experience bas been more in foreign subsidiaries than in America.

But there are competing views on all of these subjects: a bad news view of Detroit's

Perhaps the most arriculate skeptic is Prof. William Ahernathy of the Harvard Business School, one of the country's few academic experts on the car industry, who has published a book on the history of innovation at

In Abernathy's view, the 'gus will be difficult for Ford and Chrysler, and be believes that the whole industry is poorly prepared for an era in which auto technology could change

The instinct of the auto industry, Abernathy said is to seek "economies of scale" the mass production techniques that allow the companies to save production costs.

The historic effect of economies of scale bas been to discourage innovation, Abernathy believes, because new technologies require new production techniques, and thus disrupt economies of scale. Alfred Sloan, the founder of General Motors, understood this perfectly. So he made it part of the orginal GM philosophy not to seek innovations, but rather to perfect existing technologies.

Abernathy, and others, predict that the industry is on the eve of radical changes that could leave behind companies so wedded to their economies of scale that they cannot adapt. He predicts that in the future there won't be a single "best" auto technology, but many "best technologies." "It will be impossible for the small number of existing firms to stay on top of a large number of technologies," he said. "We're going to have to have more firms to cover more options. Economies of scale can no longer work as a streategy." Of the existing companies in the world,

Abernathy thinks only GM and Volkswagen, which is now a mini-GM after its acquisition of Porsche and Audi, are well-placed to cope with this kind of rapid change. Specifically, Abernathy questions the viability of the" world car" notion. He thinks the American and European markets are too different for it to work. For example, the leading American manufacturer of disc breakes makes one type: a leading European manufacturer makes more than two dozen. Abernathy predicts that new firms could come into the industry - the way Honda of Japan has in recent years - exploiting new technology to take business away from the old firms. This, he notes, is what Henry Ford, Sloan and other pioneers did to traditional makers of transportation equipment in the early 20th century.

Another skepoc about the auto industry is David E. Davis Jr., editor of Car Driver, an influential if irreverent magazine with a monthly circulation of 725,000. Car and Driver bas been arguing for years that American companies have failed to satisfy the desires of growing numbers of American car buyers for machines that are fun 10 drive, not just reliable and confortable.

"The people who run the auto companies now graduated from high school in maybe the late 1940s." Davis said in an interview. "Their dream was a Buick convertible - that was the ultimate car." The fact that several new generations with different dreams have grown up since then has not sunk in. Davis contended.

"It's very hard for these guys to adjust," he said. "They say to themselves. 'People I know, who were in the Young Republicans with me, are actually buying Toyotas!' They can't believe it. They know the Japanese have got it wrong - that their cars are too small, make too much noise, ride too hard."

So GM's most radical new small cars, the X-Cars, ride like Buicks. Car and Driver has given the X-Cars rave reviews, but Davis notes that they're still Detroit products of the old school. After driving one of them, "you'll never feel like you just met the greatest girl in the world," Davis said.

Moreover, though X-Cars are selling well. GM's market research shows that most buyers of the new models picked them over another American car. In other words, these unusually economical and well-designed American cars still are not seriously challenging the foreign imports.

Skeptics have other quetions about the optimists arguments. For example, if GM is about to mount an offensive overseas, as it is. what will that do to Ford's foreign earnings, which now keep Ford afloat?

And if price is the key to the success of Japanese cars, why are they still outselling American models now that their prices are often higher? The same can be asked of the relatively expensive but hot-selling Volkswagen Rabbit, which is now made in

In fact, the optimists and the skeptics are making predictions that neither can yet count on with confidence. The future is extraordi-

The behavior of the market is also unpredictable. Executives at AMC note that barely a year ago they were seriously considerin junking tens of thousands of Volkswager engines they had bought and felt then the could not use. At the same moment, early i 1979, Ford was happily selling out its entir year's production of its Mark V Lincoln Con tinental, its biggest gas guzzler. Then the spring gas lines appeared. The future also depends on unforseeable technological developments - or a lack o them. Some in Detroit feel the car as we have known it is on the verge of extinction; other say they can't yet foresee a substitute. So prophets must retreat to the short term and that can be seen with some clarity. It wil be filled with smaller, more expensive cars At least the American industry will be able to make small cars. Arguably the governmen regulation the industry decries made this possible; without it, GM, Ford and Chrysler were unlikely to move as fast as they did to shrink their automobiles.

Now they must expand their profits. Traditionally the American companies made theu money on big cars, spare parts and accessories. "No one (in Detroit) has figured out how to make a high profit on a small car," according to analyst Jouppi. Now that must

The industry's solution is easy to imagine - it is already under way. While the cost of all cars has risen steadily, small car prices have gone up the fastest. The price of the new Chevy Citation, one of the X-Cars, has gone up nearly 15 per cent since the model was introduced last April. A fully-equipped Citation can cost nearly $ 7,000.

And the Chevette's sticker price has risen almost 20 per cent since the fall of 1978, substantially more than the rate of inflation. With price rises like this and continued inflation, the $ 15,000 Chevette will be a reality hefore the end of the decade.

perhaps the most vivid symbol of the difficulties America's carmakers now face. Onefourth of the cars sold in America today are made overseas. In California, the figure is one in two. Every time these numbers bave jumped another notch, Detroit has declared that the trend to foreign cars has about, ended. Every time the numbers have jumped

Despite the problems of unprofitability and foreign competition, though, people who work in the auto industry here exude optimism about the '80s. Fred G. Secrest, for example, a vice president of Ford, put it like this: "I do not see on the horizon a replacement for the product. Over the next 10 or 20 because 60 per cent of American car buyers stick to the same make of American car.

Discussions with a variety of industry executives and outside analysts indicate there are two equally plausible, if mutually contradictory, ways to look at the future of the American can business - a good news view, and a bad news view.

According to the good news view, the worst has passed, or nearly. "This industry bas been through hell," in the words of Thomas H. Hanna, executive vice president of the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Associaoon. But last year, he and others noted, the American cars sold in this country actually got better gas mileage (on average, 19.6) costs and a deliberate policy of pricing Japanese cars sold bere at low levels. According to a common analysis, the Japanese make their real profits at home, and use the American market to keep their large permanent work-forces employed and achieve economies of mass production.

American auto executives and officials of the United Auto Workers believe it is inevitable that the big Japanese carmakers will begin production in the United States. Houda already has announced plans to do so recently, Douglas Fraser, President of the visited Toyota officials in Japan to press the case for American plants comparable to the one Volkswagen bas opened out-

The elections were the second in Spain to oame automous governments since the 1935-39 Spanish Civil War. Catalans elected their last parliament in 1932.

Basques voted 12 days ago to install with a clear majority a Nationalist local government led by Businessman Carlos Garaicoechea.

Both regions fought against Gen. Francisco Franco during the civil war.

Despite good weather, 37 percent of the 4.3 million Catalans eligible to vote stayed away from the polls.

Pujol had said before the voting he would exclude the communists from any governmeot he formed.

CHINESE DIVORCE China has allowed the Western world a glimpse into its legal system, permitting reporters into a Chinese court that granted a divorce to a 30-year-old woman who said her husband beat her.

The divorce was given to bank cashier Zhou Huixie after a Feb. 8 hearing in which she wept and pleaded with the judge to end almost four years of marriage.

The trial was believed the first opened to the Western press and was widely publicized as an example of marital law proceedings in China.

At the end of the 21/2 hour proceeding, the court adjourned without a finding and urged a reconcilation.

The decision was announced Friday by the information department of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, which deals with journalists.

The husband agreed to the wife's divorce appeal," a ministry spokesman said. "The court was not able to reconcile the marriage and granted the divorce."

The Peking People's Intermediate Court conducted the hearing on the wife's appeal which already had been turned down by a lower court. She said her husbaod, truck driver Han Fali, 35, beat her, sometimes during agruments over his support of her mother, and she suffered two miscarriages as a result. She also accused him of gambling. The husband at first denied, theo aek-nowledged, the bentings but said they were minor. The judge accused him of chauvinistie thinking.

In China divorce still is regarded as shameful, National statistics are not available but Peking's Chongwen district reported 9,263 weddings and 174 divorces far 1979.

A court officer said the main causes of divorce are loss of affection, maltreatment, adultery, constant quarrels and sometimes political and financial problems.

Diplomats said the measures reflected President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr's aim of creating on economically independent state, increasing domestic output and cutting dependence on imports.

They would also belp in the fight against profiteering and inflation. But the effect on merchants in the Tehran bazaar, center for much of Iran's trade, remains unclear and the experts said it was hard to see much scope for private husinessmen if the new rules were fully and quickly implemented.

Merchants will still be to seek out foreign suppliers. But all goods will have to he imported through state huying and distribution centers.

The merchants will be able to clear goods through customs with authorization from a state center. But they will have to hand over between 30 per cent and 50 per cent of the merchandise to the centers which will sell them through government cooperatives.

The aystem was announced on the eve of the Persian new year and the reaction of merchants will not be known until the bazaar reopens next Wednesday. The bazaar, which operates from a large section of mosque-owned land in south Tehran, is an influential and very conservative body which has traditionally backed the 1slamie clergy. It finances a vast majority of private sector industry and commerce.

The economic experts said it has so far remained relatively untouched by revolutionary measures such as the abolition of interest rates announced last year hut may resent what it sees as "unislamie" government interference in commercial affairs.

Bazaar merchants played a vital role in the creation on last year's revolution and their reaction to the latest measures will be vital." Some diplomats say the immediate effect of the system could be to halt new private sector imports until the situation becomes clearer. They added, however, that in the longer run it could simply become an extra layer of bureaucratic interference without fundamentally changing the highly resilient traditional system.

Other diplomats, taking a more positive view, said the loss of import business in the bazaar would be compensated for by increased domestic trade and more effective measures against inflation, now running at more than 20 per cent, measured by wholesale prices.

Venezuela hits oil import tax

CARACAS, March 21 (R) - Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti has criticized President Jimmy Carter's decision to impose taxes on oll imports as inconvenient and undesirable.

Calderon Berti, who is president of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), said the new tax, announced last weekend, was expected to bring in about $ 10 hillion a year.

"This makes one think the main aim of the measure was to seek to balance the national hudget, which has been in deficit for the past 12 years," he said in a statement distributed by the state news agency VENPRES. "It is inconvenient and undesirable that industrialized countries should regularly raise taxes on .. oil products as a basic source of tax revenue," Calderon said.

The miniter said he would have preferred a direct tax on petrol sales to the public, as opposed to oil imports, imposed by Congress. As it was, the U.S. public might be led to link higher import costs to some OPEC decision, which would be a completely wrong conclusion, he said.

In Quito, Ecuadorian natural resources minister Jose Corsino Cardena expressed fears that the U.S. import tax would cut Ecuador's oil sales.

The minister said he hoped the U.S. Congress would approve a direct sales tax as sonn as possible so the import tariff could be

Federal Reserve pledges tight money maintenance

WASHINGTON, March 21 (R) — The head of the U.S. central bank has pledged to maintain a tight credit and money policy despite Congressional plans for slashing federal spending to balance the 1981

Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said his fundamental aim would be to continue the policy until he actually saw a drop in inflation, now running at about 19 per cent,

A strong advocate of budget restraint to fight inflation, Volcker also warned it would he dangerous for Congress to cut taxes at present and predicted that the long-anticipated recession would occur this year.

Testifying before a joint Congressional economic committee hearing, he sought to dispel the notion that if Congress balanced the budget he could ease up on the board's right money policy.

He said restricting money would continue but his job would be easier with federal spending cuts, removing pressures on credit markets that arise when the government has to keep borrowing to pay its

Meanwhile, the House of Representatives pressed on with cuts in federal programs to meet its goal of slashing $1 billion from the 1981 budget to prod the first surplus in 12 years.

A balanced budget is at the hear President Jimmy Carter's new a inflation program, combined with h and credit card restrictions, and a $1 billion import fee on oil to conse energy. The fee will become effective May 15, raising gasoline prices by 10c a gallon.

Republicans in Congress are deme ing tax cuts to improve savings and l business productivity, and Volcker sai enthusiastically supported them not now.'

Despite record high interest rates, 5 ing inflation, sluggish economic gro standstill productivity, and depressed and housing industries, the government was still able to report some mod good economie news.

It said the overall 1979 balance of ments with other countries was near ance, with only a$317 million deficit! current account on goods and ser bongbt and sold in international t merce. In 1978 the deficit was $13.4" lion.

Olympics committees to decide

Europe balks at U.S. boycott support

STRASBOURG, France. March 21 (P) -The United States' efforts to put together a boycott of the Moscow Olympics has received scant encouragement from Western European sports ministers meeting here.

Of the 21 member-states of the council of Europe, the 30-year-old symbol of European unity, only Britain, Holland and Portugal voiced support for a boycott.

At the meeting of ministers and secretaries of state for sport Thursday, Sweden, Switzerland, Austria and Cyrus took a strictly neutral line, saying they would leave the decision to their national Olympics committees and not try to influence them one way or the other. The other 14 member states also say the decision is up to their Olympic committees, but have not decided whether they will influence them for or against a boycott. This breakdown was announced by West German Interior Minister Rudolf Burn, who is also in charge of sports and chaired the meeting on this eastern French city.

Even two of the countries listed by the U.S. State Department as officially pro-boycott-Norway and Luxenibourg - turned out to he undecided.

Holland's secretary of state for sports, C.G. Wallis De Vries, told his colleagues that if they attended the Olympics, they would he lening the Kremlin "use sport for a very bad

He could not see Western sportsmen going to a country "which has crossed the border of another country with its army, he said. British minister for sports Hector Monro told reporters that European governments lack popular support for a boycott. He blamed "the politicians, who have failed to bring home to the people the seriousness of what happened in Afghanistan."

French sports minister Jean-Pierre Soisson was most forceful in arguing against a boycott, saying it would be an intolerable mingling of sports and polines. He quoted to the meeting from earlier council of Europe resolutions against mixing the two.

Monro said to reporters that "in a perfect world' sport and politics might be kept separate, "But unfortunately we don't live in a

The French placed themselves in the camp that has not yet decided whether or not to influence its Olympic committees' decision, and some detected in this a slight softening of the French position.

French officials say they are disappointed that the Soviets have not warned at all to France's conciliatory approach of keeping its diplomatic lines to Moscow clear while demanding it withdraw its troops from Afghanistan.

The meeting, hilled as "an informal gathering" of sports ministers and not a full-scale council of Europe conference, spent only a couple of hours discussing the boycott and then adjourned.

West Germany, initially thought to be moving towards a boycott, also was noncommittal Thursday. Sports minister Rudolf Baum, who chaired the meeting, told a reporter: "The West German position is to not decide now." He said no decision would be taken "without consideration of the position of our sporting organizations."

To counter Soisson's argument about keeping politics out of sport, sources said, Britain's Monro quoted to the delegates from a council of Europe resolution on sports in April, 1978, recognizing "that international politics have become involved in sport."

Soisson promptly quoted a different clause of the same document affirming "the inde-pendence of the national and international sports bodies in all matters concerning...the organization of the international sporting

Meanwhile, U.S. President Jimmy Carter met with 100 U.S. athletes at the White House Friday to discuss his call for a boycott of the Olympic games in Moscow plans for possible alternative competitive events.

Edward Williams of New York, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Committee Athletes Advisory Council, said 40 of his 47-member group will attend along with representatives of the national governing bodies of various Olympic sports and several gold medal win-

The Supreme Council for Sport in Africa (SCA) will not dictate to member countries on whether to participate in the Moscow Olympic games, the council's Nigerian president Braham Ordia said Thursday.

He told the new executive committee of the African Sports Journalists union it was up to the 48 member countries decide on their own athletes participation in the games next Ordia said: "we cannot dictate terms to member countries. Who are we to do so? These are our financiers.

"But what we decided at our ninth general assembly in Yanunde last December was that we should take part-in the Olympics."

He said he was happy that Zimhabwe had severed sporting links with South Africa and added: "True there is a little progress that has been made in the integration of sports men and women of all colors in South Africa, but that has not eliminated the system of

Billie Jean King rides the comeback trail

NEW YORK, March 21 (AP) - Billie Jean King, playing her "first great matches since 1974," says returning to the summit of women's tennis"is not necessarily my goal."

"On any given day I'm capable of heating anyone in the world. But I have to be reasonable at my age," said King, at 36 the oldest player in the $300,000-dollar women's championships. "I can't play week in and week out at the same pace that Martina (Navratilova) and Iracy (Austin) play." King, ranked No. 1 in the world four times, lost to top-seeded Navratilova 6-2, 6-1 Thursday night after disposing of Virginia Wade 6-1, 6-3 Wednesday in the doubleelemination championships.

She broke Navratilova's 28-match streak last month in Houston, where she won her second tournament title of the circuit, and had two other semifinal finishes.

"The feedback I get from the public the is that she can't do it any more.' If I heard some one say, 'she's in great shape and looks better than when she was a fat 22-year-old, said king." I feel better now at 36 than 23. I'm not tired physically at all."

Navratilova, who captured the Wimbledon doubles championship with King in 1979, said King "can beat anybody."

"The only way you can say she's really made it is if she becomes No. 1 again. People don't expect her to do it because she's 36. I wouldn't put past her," said Navranlova. King has undergone knee and ankle surgery four times, most recently in 1978. She lifts weights to keep in shape and will take two weeks off after the championships to King, had the crowd of 10,312 at Madison Square Garden firmly in her corner Thursday but she never got her serve-and-volley gaine in gear. Navratilova was simply too strong from both the baseline and the oet. "Everything was low at her feet. She didn't get any easy points," Navratilova said."I was really nervous tonight, especially with the way she cleaned up the court with me last

"I haven't been this psyched up for a match in a long time. We're friends, but once we do play, we're out there for killing."

But King was not at all pleased with her play Thursday.

"I moved like a cow tonight," she said. "I really blew the match in the second set. I never double-faulted so much, I'm really

In Frankfurt, West Germany, Former Wimbledon champion Stan Smith of the U.S. pounded out a thrilling 6-3, 7-6 win against Hans Gildemeister of Chile that went to 10-8 in the deciding tie-break to gain the quarterfinals of the $175,000 Frankfurt WCI men's tennis tournament.

Egypt meets Morocco for third place

LAGOS, March 21 (R) — Egypt and Morocco, narrowly beaten in semi-finals, met here Friday in the third place playoff in the African Nations soccer cup.

Egypt lost their semi-final against Algeria in a penalty competition after the score was level 2-2 after 90 minutes and two periods of extra time produced no further goals.

Morocco lost 1-0 to Nigeria, who reached the final for the first time with an early goal which resulted from a defensive errors.

The hattle for third place promises to be a close thing with Egypt probably enritled to regard themselves as favorites hut only by a shade of odds.

Egypt showed the better form in the group matches although they also lost 1-0 to Nigeria in the last of their qualifying games. Morocco looked out of the running when they drew with Guinea and then lost to Algeria in the group matches. But they scraped into the semi-finals by bearing titleholders Ghana.

Nigeria and Algeria meet in the final on Saturday. Meanwhile, Real Madrid, the elite Spanish club who almost made the European soccer cup their own property in the lage '50s. squeezed into this season's semifinals thanks to a goal five minutes from the end in Madrid. Their Scottish visitors, Celtic - also former winners - brought a 2-0 first leg lead from the Glasgow leg but a minute before halftime Carlos Santillana scored, signaling a tough second half in prospect. West German star Uli Stielike made it 2-2 on aggregate and Juanito's late goal crushed the Scots.

Britons disappointed by Celtic were consoled hy the startling recovery in East Berlin of Nottingham Forest, the holders.

Dynamo Berlin's 1-0 away leg lead vanished in 15 minutes when Trevor Francis headed in. Next be put Forest ahead and John Robertson made it 3-0 from the penalty spot after Michael Noack had fouled him. Early in the second half Dynamo in turn scored a penalty goal - through Frank Terletzki - but Forest stood firm and won 3-1 on aggregate. . The West German champions Hamburg plus two past winners, Ajax (Netherlands) and Real Madrid (Spain) joined the English holders, Nottingham Forest, in the last four of the European soccer cup when the quarter-finals were completed.

Hajduk Split beat Hamburg 3-2 in Yugoslavia, failing only on the away goal rule after Primorac had missed a penalty. He shot straight at German goalkeeper Kargus, Ajaz, inspired by world cup star Ruud

Krol, made light work of their French visitors, St. Etienne, winning 4-0, DEFEAT: Victor Korchnoi raises from his chair and leaves Tigran Petrosian meditating for 15 minutes. Petrosian laid down his king after 15 minutes in a gesture of defeat.

Petrosian takes rest after dispute

VELDEN, Austria, March 21 (AP) - Following a dispute with the referee, Soviet Chess grandmaster Tigrian Petrosian Thursday called for a third - and his last - rest day in his quarterfinal clash with exiled Russian Viktor Korchnoi. Korchnoi and Petrosian Wednesday night played their sixth game to a draw, with Korchnoi leading his opponent 3.5 to 2.5 points. Referees Harry Golombek of Britain on Wednesday had scheduled the seventh game to start Thursday the day earlier reserved for a possible adjourned game. Petrosian, team contested that for lack of such adjournment, the day should be automatically free. When the jury overruled the Soviet protest, Petrosian claimed a rest day. With no game scheduled for Friday, the seventh game will start Saturday, March 22.

Either player may ask for a total of three rest days in addition to play free days scheduled by organiers under tournament rules. Korchnoi has so far not claimed any of the three rest days due to him. Alexander Beilin, leader of the Soviet chess delegation here, said in an interview in future his team may not accept Golombek as a referee in crucial chess meets. Petrosian, 51, who was world champion

When they refused to change the date, he invoked his last free day to block play. He also said the Soviet chess Federation would issue an official protest against the jury's of his free days, officials said since he is scheduled to participate in an international tournament in London early next month.

It is unlikely that Korchnoi will call for any

Freedom ruled out

American hostages in the U.S. embassy in Tehran will get Iranian new year treats hut not their freedom unol the former Shah is returned, their militant captors said Friday.

Meanwhile, Ayatollah Khomeini called for a crackdown on foes of his regime, and President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr warned, "I will have no mercy. I will put all the plotters down." He addressed a rally that had just heard Khomeini's new year's message.

A spokesman for the emhassy captors, reached by telephone from Nicosia, Cyprus, said of the hostages, "We will give them goodies and cookies. It will be a simple cere-

"Tonight you will understand what we will do. We will give prizes to a couple of them." He did not describe the prizes.

Asked whether this meant some of the hostages - who began their 139th day in captivity Friday - might be freed, the captor said: No, none of them will be released. They will not be released until the criminal Shah is returned to Iran."

Khomeini's message was read hy his son Ahmad to hundreds of thousands of Iranians

Dollar rebounds in profit-taking; gold prices fall

LONDON, March 21 (AP) - After falling for two days due largely to profit-taking, the U.S. dollar advanced Friday against major world curreccies. Gold prices fell despite official South African confirmation that it has cut back hullion sales. South Africa supplies more than half the world's gold.

After dropping $14 to $15 an ouoce in New York overnight to a closing level of $535-$536 gold retreated further Friday in Hong Kong to close at$ 525.53 down $22.60. At mid-morning, Loodon's hig five bullion dealers "fixed" the gold price at $535 an ounce, down from $552.50 late Thursday. In Zurich, the price was $536 off from $551. Rumors of a South African cutback in sales had contributed to a sharp gold rally mid-week, hut even confirmation of lower output South African Finance Minister Owen Harwood failed to stem Friday's decline.

Silver was one dollar lower in London at $21.25 ao ounce.

Closing gold prices (io U.S. dollars per troy ounce): London 537.08 Paris Frankfurt 530.52 Zurich 524.00 525.53. Hong Kong graves of relatives killed in the revolution

"I want this year to be the year of security in Iran so people may live in peace and prosperity," the message said. It said saboteurs of oil pipelines must be punished, trouhlemakers in the army expelled, armed groups inciting strikes stopped and the revolutionary courts barred from using armed groups. In addition, the avatoliah attacked people he said were enemies to Islam. He included some university teachers, journalists and Marxist groups. He also said any disorderly conduct hy revolucionary guardsmen will result in expulsion from the guard corps.

As freedom for the hostages looked farther and farther away, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim caudoned the United States against military action in Iran.

"If you think you can solve this problem by force you are wrong" because that would jeopardize the lives of the captives and "create and explosion" in the entire Middle East. Waldheim told a news conference Thursday.

Waldheim, in Washington for a meeting with U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, was concerned about a call hy Senate Republicans to consider a oaval blockade and mining of Iran's ports.

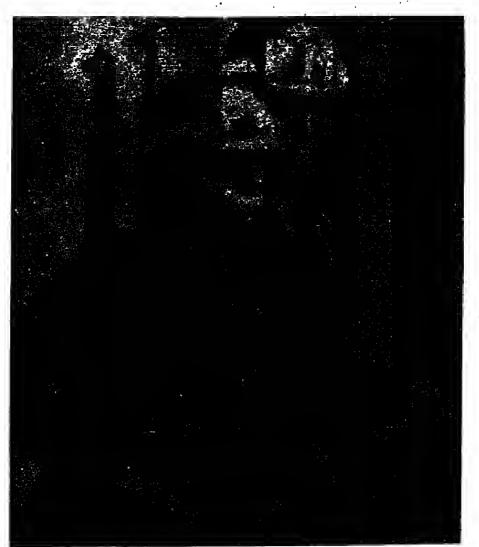

Waldheim praised U.S. President Jimmy Carter's "restraint and firmness." He said he was confident "patience and perseverance" will lead to the release of the emhassy hostages and the three American diplomats who are prisoners at the Iranian foreign ministry. Waldheim said he was hopeful the U.N. investigating commission will he allowed to return to Iran after the oew Parliament is elected. And he said he had received indications recently that the crisis will end regardless of who wins the election. He did not say what the indications were. But the U.S. government told the Interna-tional Court of Justice Thursday the signals coming from Iran suggest the hostates may be held "iodefinitely." State Department legal adviser Roberts B.

Oweo eoded a three-day appearance before the world court at The Hague with an appeal for a speedy final judgement against the Iraolan revolutionary regime. He said the court is the most promising hope for the ultimate release of the hostages. But the Iranians ignored an interim demand from the court oo Dec. 15 for the release of the captives, and they are expected to do likewise if the final ruling is not to their liking.

Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolutionary regime, has said the 270 memhers of the new Majlis, the Iranian parliament, will decide whether to free the hostages, and Ayatollah Beheshti, first secretary of the ruling Revolutionary Council, has said the Majlis couldn't discuss the issue until mid-May. But further delays in that schedule now appear in prospect.

Embassy talks to resume

BOGOTA, March 21 (AP). - The Colombian government has agreed to a request from hostages and guerrillas in the Dominican Republic embassy here to resume direct negotiations "without conditions" with the

M-19 guerrillas.
The decisioo Thursday came 23 days after the takeover of the embassy, where 32 hostages still are being held, and eight days after the talks stalemated.

Foreign Minister Diego Uribe Vargas said tne talks, first scheduled for Friday, would be held Monday. The postponement followed a meeting Thursday between Unibe Vargas, President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala and representatives from countries whose diplomats

Tito's condition remains grave

BELGRADE, March 21 (AP) - President Josip Broz Tito's doctors said Friday his condition remained very grave and without major changes from the day before. Tito's eight-doctor medical panel said it was cotinuing intensive treatment to keep the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader alive. "The general state of health of President of the Republic Josip Broz Tito, which is without any further significant changes compared to yesterday, remains very grave," the doctors said in their mid-day medical advisory, Tito was in his 70th straight day of hospitalization, suffering from kidney failure, heart weakness, pneumonia, internal bleeding and

His doctors had said the day before a problem of voluminous bleeding in the stomach had almost stopped and there were signs of abatement in the penumonia.

Tito has been kept alive with an artificial kidney machine since at least Feb. 22, the day before doctors first disclosed his pneumonia and five days before they revealed the hleed-

NEW DELHI, March 21 (R) - Home Minister Zail Singh iotimated Friday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was behind the unrest to India's troubled northeast region bordering Communist China and Burma, the Press Trust of India reported.

Singh told parliament that U.S. Ambassador Robert Goheen "along with some CIA agents" toured the oorth-east last year. "It is now clear which are the forces behind the agitation," he said.

He told a Communist party questioner that the Soviet Union was not among these forces.

Singh had intervened in discussion about the corth eastern region, where $1 people have been killed and 15,0000 made homeless in Assam state since last September. The Assamese have been agitating against people coming into the state from other areas.

There have also been attacks on officials and security forces hy secessionist rebels in Mozoram and Manipur territories.

embassy crisis, said the president gave a "frank and very positive" explanation of the status of the talks. "We all left with great confidence" about the result of the sixth round of direct negotiations, Quevedo said,

The M-19 guerrillas requested oew talks Wednesday, less than 24 hours after the government refused, in a televised statement, to meet a "non-negotiable" demand to free 28 alleged poliocal prisoners.

In the hroadcast, the government said reopening the talks indicated a softening of the M-19 position. However, there has been no sign the guerrillas were willing to give up. The fifth round of face-to-face talks ended March 13 when both sides said they would resume only when the other gave in. Officials at the U.S. embassy said Thursday that American Ambassador Diego Asencio called them Wednesday for the first time in five days. Asencio is one of 13 ambassadors and acting ambassadors reportedly inside occupied embassy who had telephoned their staffs daily until the talks broke off. .ne Turbay government has called the embassy occupation the worst crisis in Colomhia's 170 years of independence. Turbay has offered to fly the guerrillas ont of the country hut not to meet their other demands. M-19 stands for Movement 19, referring to elections on April 19, 1970, the guerrillas daim were fraudulent.

Colombian authorioes have said they would not ransom the hostages, but would allow other countries with hostages in the embassy to pay ransom. The guerrillas originally requested $ 50 million for release of the hostages, but apparently dropped the demand early in the negotiacons.

Negotiating issues have reportedly narrowed to the guerrilla demand for the release of alleged political prisoners. Originally, they had demanded freedom for 311 such pris-

Martial law abolished in Rhodesia

SALISBURY, March 21 (AP) - Martial law, which covered up to 90 per cent of Rhodesia during the last two years, was lifted Friday, a spokesman for British governor Lord Soames said.

Nicholas Fenn, the spokesman, told a news conference Thursday that the governor signed three legal instruments that will effectively end martial law, implemented by this nation's white minority government in late 1978 to give security forces unlimited powers to act against black na oonalist guerrillas in the countryside.

The Briosh colony's 15-year-old state of emergency, however, was expected to continue after Prime Minister Robert Mngabe assumes power of an independent Zimbabwe on April 18.

A constitutional order promulgated in London gave Mugabe the option to allow the state of emergency, renewed hy Soames in January, to run its six-month until July.

· Emergency powers were first introduced by former white Prime Minister Ian Smith before he led the colony's rebellion against Britain in 1965 to avoid giving way to majority rule by Rhodesia'a seven million hlacks. Fern said "some hundreds" of people were sentenced under martial law, which gave Rhodesian soldiers the power to confiscate property, shoot curfew violators and hring to secret trial under capital charges guerrilla suspects or collaborators.

Soames signed an amnesty ordinance which conferred a free pardon for all politically motivated offenses committed at any time in the past up to March 1, 1980, and for any act done in good faith under the authority of martial law, Fenn said.

He added that prisooers guilty of politically motivated offenses in most cases would henefit from the amnesty, but those convicted of ordinary criminal offenses and tried by martial law.courts as a matter of convenieoce would remain in custody for the time 2 6 5

It was reported earlier this week that all but one of the 1,279 blacks detained without trial under martial law have been released. The ooe exception faced charges under civil law.

Fenn also announced that Britain which had called upon Western countries for aid, was making an immediate and unconditional grant of $ 15 million to help in the reconstruction of Zimbahwe and would be pledging 'substantial addition aid' for the next two or
